TEACHING EXPERIENCE

Le dichiarazioni rese nel presente curriculum sono da ritenersi rilasciate ai sensi degli artt. 46 e 47 del D.P.R. 445/2000.

OCT., 2022 →	University of Milano Bicocca Department of Sociology and Social Research Public Policy: Decision and Implementation (42 hrs for BA students) Description: The course introduces the main topics and concepts of political science, with particular attention to policy-making processes. After an introduction to the discipline and its objects of study (politics vs policy), the course covers the problems of collective action and decision-making processes within groups, the actors (parties, interest groups and experts) and the institutions (parliaments, governments and public administration) of the representative process. Finally, the course focuses on the chain of responsiveness in the realms of fiscal and welfare policies, from parties' electoral promises to national governments' budgetary choices, to verify whether and to what extent the former translate into coherent policy choices.
MARCH, 2022 →	University of Milano Bicocca Department of Sociology and Social Research Public Policy Analysis and Evaluation (42 hrs for BA students) Description: The course focuses on the effectiveness of policy tools. Students learn how to distinguish between perception and evidence of the effects achieved by a policy. Moreover, they are trained in evaluating the goodness and the robustness of the empirical evidences used by politicians and policy makers in the public debate to claim the success of a policy. In detail, the course covers the following topics: 1. Public policies as combinations of rules, taxes, expenditure and information; 2. Public policy evaluation: what does it mean and what is it for; 3. The evaluation design: the counterfactual logic and the Rubin model; 4. The experimental method: randomized controlled trials; 5. Non-experimental methods (i.e. difference in differences, statistical matching, regression discontinuity design and interrupted time series); 6. Policy analysis in the era of big data.
APR. 2020 – FEB. 2022	University of Milano Department of Social and Political Sciences Multivariate analysis for social scientists (Module leader - 40 hrs for MA students) Description: The course provides a gentle introduction to the logic of quantitative statistical analysis in social and political sciences. By the end of the course, students are able to: 1. Develop a sound quantitative research design on social and political phenomena (i.e., a great emphasis is placed on the formulation of hypotheses and on the use of data to test such hypotheses); 2. Perform descriptive and inferential multivariate analyses on STATA and R; 3. Master debates on the assumptions underlying the main statistical techniques social and political scientists use.

APR. – JUN. 2019	University of Milano Department of Social and Political Sciences Research Designs in Political and Policy Studies (Module leader - 20 hrs for MA students) Description: The course introduces students to quantitative research designs in social and political sciences. By the end of the course, students are expected to: 1. Understand under which assumptions correlation unveils causation in observational studies; 2. Develop a sound research design and perform multivariate analyses on STATA and R; 3. Grasp the improvements introduced by weighting and matching procedures; 4. Master debates on the necessary conditions for their own inferences on observational data to justify a causal interpretation.
JAN. – DEC. 2018	University of Milano Bicocca Department of Sociology and Social Research Public Policy Evaluation (Lecturer and module leader with Alessia Damonte - 42 hrs for BA students) Description: See above.
JAN. – DEC. 2017	University of Milano Bicocca Department of Sociology and Social Research Public Policy Evaluation (Module leader - 42 hrs for BA students) Description: See above.
JAN. 2016 – DEC. '18	University of Bologna Department of Political and Social Sciences International Relations (Teaching assistant, Module leader: Eugenia Baroncelli - 20 hrs for BA students) Description: The course provides students with the key elements to interpret and understand international dynamics at the systemic and national levels. At the end of the classes, students are expected to be familiar with the seminal debates in the discipline of IR and the orthodox tripartition of international political economy (IPE).
OCT. 2013 – JAN. '19	University of Milano Department of Social and Political Sciences Political Science (Teaching assistant, Module leader: Luigi Curini – 60 hrs for BA students) Description: The course aims at introducing the key topics in the study of political science and the key tools for the study of politics. The list of topics includes: the origin of states, regime determinants and regime transitions, collective action problem, group decision-making, legislative-executive relations, electoral systems, parties and party

MARCH 2017 systems, electoral competition, institutional veto players, and the consequences of adopting different varieties of democratic institutions
NASP Graduate School in Social and Political Sciences
Methodology Matters Seminar ‘Modelling Causal Pathways - Structural Equations and Mediation of Causal Effects’ (Teaching assistant, Module leader: Leonce Röth, University of Cologne – 10 hrs for Ph.D. students)
 Description: Starting from causal scope conditions, participants are familiarized with directed graphs as a visualization of causal assumptions and learn to use the ‘back-door criteria’ to keep models as parsimonious as possible. Building on this, effect heterogeneity is addressed with mediation models using the structural equation framework.
