ANNEX 1: Psychology Scientific Disciplinary Sectors

In Italy, psychological courses are classified into Scientific-Disciplinary Groups (GSD), each with a code that distinguishes its scientific and educational contents. These groups are further subdivided into Scientific-Disciplinary Sectors (SSD), forming a total of eight SSDs. This classification has recently replaced the old M-PSI sectors, although there is a direct correspondence between the two, as illustrated in the table below.

Courses taken in Italy are already linked to the SSDs, while courses completed abroad are matched to the SSDs by a commission, applying a similarity criterion. The eight SSDs in Italy are as follows:

SSD	Old name	Description
PSIC-01A	M-PSI/01	General Psychology: Focuses on basic mental processes such as perception, attention, memory, language, thinking, and emotion. Explores how these functions influence behavior and interact with the environment. Includes cognitive theory and models.
PSIC-01B	M-PSI/02	Psychobiology / Neuroscience: Studies the biological and neurological mechanisms underlying behavior and mental processes. Includes research on brain function, nervous systems, and the influence of genetic and hormonal factors on behavior and emotions.
PSIC-01C	M-PSI/03	Psychometrics / Quantitative Methods: Focuses on the statistical and methodological skills used in research and psychological applications. Includes mathematical and statistical methods applied to the development of psychological tests and questionnaires to assess intelligence, personality, and other psychological constructs. Includes also research design and data-analysis in psychology.
PSIC-02A	M-PSI/04	Developmental and Educational Psychology: Studies human development from birth to old age, focusing on childhood and adolescence. Includes topics like cognitive, emotional, social, and language development, as well as the role of education and learning in personality and skill evolution, as well as school psychology.
PSIC-03A	M-PSI/05	Social Psychology: Examines how people interact and influence each other in social contexts. Studies social cognition, attitudes, prejudices, group dynamics, communication, social influence, and how the social environment affects individual behavior and emotions.
PSIC-03B	M-PSI/06	Work and Organizational Psychology: Focuses on human behavior in the workplace and organizational contexts. Includes topics like work motivation, leadership, human resource management, organizational well-being, work-related stress, and group dynamics in work environments.

PSIC-04A	M-PSI/07	Psychodynamic Psychology and Psychopathology: Combines the study of psychoanalytic and psychodynamic theories with the analysis of mental disorders and psychodiagnosis techniques. Focuses on unconscious dynamics influencing behavior and psychodynamic intervention models, both in individuals and groups, on clinical interview, and on psychodynamic diagnostic tools.
PSIC-04B	M-PSI/08	Clinical and Health Psychology: Focuses on the diagnosis, treatment, and prevention of mental disorders and psychological distress. Includes sexology, psychotherapy techniques for individuals, couples, families, and groups, and health psychology.

For example:

- A Perception Psychology course in Italy would be mapped to PSIC-01A (General Psychology).
- A Neuropsychology course would be mapped to PSIC-01B (Psychobiology / Neuroscience).
- A School Psychology course would be mapped to PSIC-02A (Developmental and Educational Psychology).

Some courses may overlap multiple sectors or may not fit clearly into one sector. In these cases, the Selection Committee evaluates the course content to determine the most appropriate and consistent SSD. In cases where a course does not sufficiently align with the typical content of the PSIC sectors, it may not be recognized as part of these SSDs (e.g., Precalculus is closer to SSDs in Math rather than to PSIC-01C). In other cases, a course may not fit the existing Italian classification, In this case, the Selection Committee determines how to consider the course, relying on the syllabi if available.

In Italy, CFU (University Credits) are equivalent to "ECTS Credits" in other systems. One academic year corresponds to 60 CFU, so a Bachelor's degree (BSc) requires 180 CFU, and a Master's degree (MSc) requires 120 CFU. For exams taken abroad, the conversion to Italian CFUs is based on the credit structure of the originating university (according to the Declaration of Value and the Diploma Supplement). A typical 6 CFU course in Italy corresponds to approximately 42 hours of lectures, while an 8 CFU course corresponds to 56 hours of lectures.
