

Title	Writing of Scientific papers
Teacher	Marco Vanoni Università di Milano Bicocca – Dipartimento di Biotecnologie e Bioscienze
Language	English
Short description	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - How to read a scientific paper - The “write first-do-the-experiments-later” approach - How to structure a scientific paper - Hands-on and practical exercises: students will be asked to perform some tasks. By way of example, they will write an abstract, a cover letter or an introduction of a paper according to some specific suggestions and the material prepared by a few randomly selected students - will be read and commented - If possible, a lecture will be given by an editor of a journal of the Nature group
Target audience	The proposal is addressed to students of the science and medicine area. Most examples will focus on biology, biochemistry, systems biology and related fields. The course is not recommended for students of humanities
CFU	1
Hours	8-10
Participants (min/max):	Approximately 10/50
Calendar:	March
Notes:	The course will be programmed through online, synchronous webex lessons, unless the regulations at the moment of the erogation of the course will allow teaching in presence.